

Dr. Sanjay Peters
Associate Professor: Department of Economics
IESE Business School

Sanjay trained as an economist at California (BSc and MA) and the University of Cambridge UK (MPhil and PhD). In addition to having taught economics at a graduate level at Cambridge University (1998-2001), he has also worked as a research scholar in regional economics at Stanford University and as an economic advisor to the foreign office of the UK Government, consultant to the World Bank and the United Nations Development Programme. He serves on the Editorial Board of several scholarly journals and as an economic advisor to of a number of leading multinational companies. Currently he is Director of the Center for Emerging Markets at IESE Business School and Visiting Professor at Copenhagen Business School (2008-2011). Prior to joining IESE, he served as Associate Professor in the Department of Economics at ESADE Business School in Barcelona (2002-2008), Director of the China Executive Leadership Programme and Academic Director of the Executive MBA Programme at ISB in India, both on behalf of ESADE. His main area of specialisation, and hence publications in academic journals and books are on emerging markets risks and opportunities in Asia (primarily in India and China). He also carries out research work on the incentives for promoting growth and competitiveness within firms, entrepreneurship, analysing the determinants of macroeconomic growth, international economics, managerial economics, Neo-Coasian theories of the firm, measuring the impact of investments in human capital and institutional changes on economic growth.

Areas of Interest

International Economics
Emerging Markets
Macroeconomics
International Business